

A variety of one-story, two-story and three-story buildings, each with distinct styling and large windows, creates a lively street frontage.

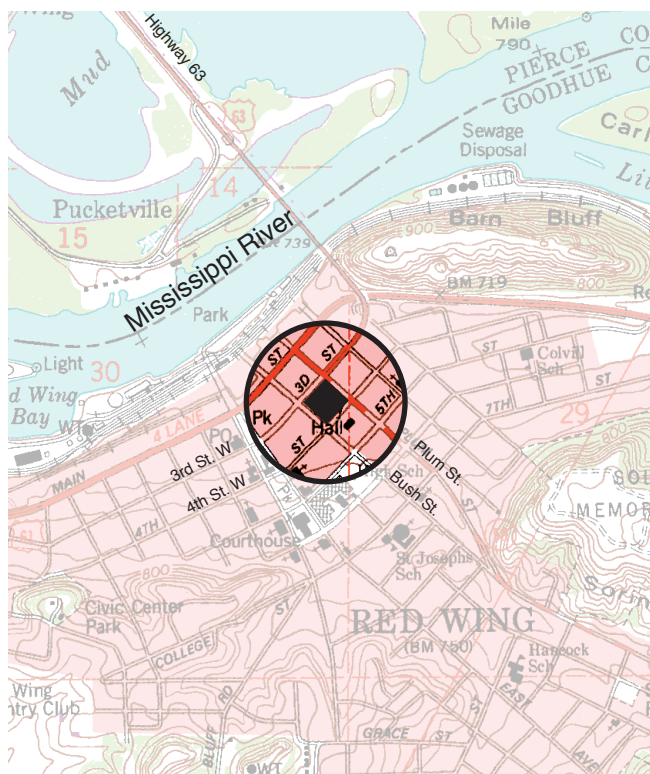

An information kiosk located across the street from the block highlighted, is used by residents and visitors alike. Benches, a hedge, and hanging baskets with flowers create a pleasant resting area along the street and minimize the visual presence of the parking lot.

Many of downtown Red Wing's buildings are mixed-use.

Angled parking has several advantages over parallel parking: it is easier for drivers to access; it provides more parking spaces than parallel parking; and it establishes more distance between the sidewalk and moving traffic, creating a pleasant pedestrian environment.
